Windspeaker, Canada's award-winning National Aboriginal publication, is preparing to publish its Annual Guide to Aboriginal Scholarships for Aboriginal students of all ages attending or planning to attend college or university.

More than 22,000 copies of this special edition will be distributed as an insert in Windspeaker throughout Indian Country – across Canada and the United States.

Just as in previous years, Windspeaker will compile a great deal of information on the variety of scholarships (now numbering more than 500!!), criteria, contact numbers and information, and application deadlines.

Windspeaker Scholarship Guide is an excellent opportunity for organizations and corporations to showcase their scholarships and bursaries specifically designed for Aboriginal students.

In many instances, corporations have developed key partnerships with educational institutions with the objective of enabling Aboriginal students to pursue careers in a diverse range of fields - these too can be included in the Guide.

In addition, space permitting, Windspeaker will include key information on the scholarship application process and tips on how to search for and obtain a scholarship. The amount of space dedicated to this feature will be directly linked to the level of support through advertising and sponsorships. Last year there was enough support for a dedicated pull-out section, but we were still pressed for space. With advertiser input, we're planning the most comprehensive Scholarship Guide ever for 2011.
